Philanthropy Irelands Response

We have closed our office but are all working from home and can be contacted by phone or by email as usual.

Events: We think it is essential that we continue to bring donors and organisations together to share good practice and build knowledge, skills and confidence – perhaps now more than ever. While all planned meeting events to end of April are cancelled, we are working to provide online opportunities for engagement.

Communications: We will provide timely and relevant information to members through our usual communications channels (PI Blog, Twitter, LinkedIn, E-Zine). To address issues in the current challenging times, we have recently launched an online resource portal for members providing information and materials on philanthropy during this time of crisis.

Collaboration: We are in constant communication with other infrastructure bodies and members to ensure needs are being met and, importantly, that civil society's voice is being heard within government. We are undergoing discussions to ensure we can maintain support to our members in whatever way we can. We welcome any contact or suggestions for further engagement.

Queries: If you have any queries please don't hesitate to get in touch with us either online or by email at info@philanthropy.ie

Wishing all our colleagues, peers, stakeholders and communities every good wish at this time. We very much look forward to further collaboration in the future.
